International Project Management Day - Sat. October 22nd

“Leading in the New Normal” - How to Lead Virtual, Distributed Teams Effectively

KEYNOTE SPEAKER: Distinguished and experienced author Peter Ivanov delivers a message of virtual and remote team engagement that needs to be heard. His upcoming book, Power Teams Beyond Borders, shows readers how to build trust and clarity amongst their virtual team members, and how to establish structured communications that allow all team members to contribute and to fully utilize the global talents of a distributed team.

ORGANIZATION: Executive Coach and leadership consultant Jenna Dillon will lead a workshop that will examine leadership and cultural ethics, the psychology of trust, and power dynamics that will help attendees learn how to reconstruct an innovative, strategic approach that will generate buy-in and build loyalty in an organization.

PEOPLE: In the new remote/hybrid normal, opportunities for feedback and guidance are not as readily available to project team members as they are in a purely in-person environment. Join project management consultant and speaker Lisa DiTullio as she shares successful coaching tips that can be incorporated into remote interactions with project team members to support delivering successful project results.

COMMUNICATION: How can PMs increase their awareness of team members' behavioral and communication styles, in a way that enhances team collaboration rather than impeding it? Join career behavioral consultant Jane Roqueplot as she guides us through the DISC model, and how we can use DISC to better understand ourselves and others and identify, understand, appreciate, and leverage behavioral strengths.

TECHNOLOGY: Many of us have bad habits and collaboration anti-patterns that we are carrying over from our years of in-office work. These are exacerbated by the dynamics of hybrid and remote work, and are damaging collaboration and engagement across our teams. Bryan Stallings will discuss specific strategies for recognizing and addressing such habits and review competencies we must develop to build more connected, engaged and innovative teams.
